1. Summary of SOKENDAI Freshman Course

The Freshman Course is a four-day intensive course for newly enrolled students of SOKENDAI.

This course has two objectives:

This course consists of three sections: "Exploring Diversity in Academia (EDA)," "Researchers and Society," and "Communication Skills for Researchers."

For the class details, please check the FC website (<https://freshman.soken.ac.jp>).

Exploring Diversity in Academia (EDA)	Researchers and Society	Communication Skills for Researchers
You will learn about the diversity and commonality of research activities conducted at each inter-university research institute. You will also imagine your research life at SOKENDAI, which is about to begin. In addition, you will interact with students and faculty members from different fields.	You will learn about the responsibilities of researchers in society through discussion and lectures.	This class is offered on demand. [SOKENDAI Privacy Policy] Please refer to the site below.

https://www.soken.ac.jp/en/outline/pr/aboutsite/privacy_policy/

4. Things to do after Registration before the Freshman Course starts

Step 1: On or about October 1, we will send an email to all FC participants with a password to log in to the "Information" page on the FC website (<https://freshman.soken.ac.jp>) for students only.

The following information will be available for students on the "Information" page.

- Schedule of classes and sessions
- Information on each session and the faculty member in charge
- Download links for each session's materials
- Important notice for taking the On-demand classes

Step 2: Pre-assignment Submit “an episode with unexpected social impacts.”

In the “Seeing Your Research from Different Perspectives” session on October 9, we will work on and discuss critical issues and cases within your research field that may have some degree of significant social impact and influence.

Submit the following items to describe the episode* via the FC “Information” website. The submission deadline is October 6.

1. When did it happen?
2. What people (or things) are involved?
3. Please show two perspectives on the episode (perspectives #1 and #2).
4. Notes to summarize the main points of your episode.

* What is the “Episode”?

- A “true” story that can be found in your research field (e.g., you can search on the internet or ask your colleagues) and/or based on your research experience.
- Such episodes/cases (with unexpected social impacts) that are well-known within your research field, but may not be so familiar for researchers in other fields and/or general public.
- If you cannot find any, it is also fine to prepare an episode in related research fields (preferably close to your research field).

[Example of the Episode]

Episode: “Starlink” satellites launched by Space X American aerospace company.

1. When: Since 2019 (first Starlink launch)
2. Related people or things: Satellites, people all over the world, astronomers
3. Perspective #1: Benefits of low-cost, high-performance satellite Internet access service
Perspective #2: Serious light pollution problem for ground-based observation by astronomers
4. Notes: Improvements in communication technology by Starlink satellites have made it possible to connect to high-speed Internet from anywhere in the world. However, the satellites reflect enough sunlight at night which causes a serious problem for sensitive telescopes.

All participants are expected to present this pre-assignment episode to the class in the “Seeing Your Research from Different Perspectives” session on October 9. Then, you will need your laptop and a presentation software (e.g., PowerPoint) to present this episode. If you have any questions regarding the above matters, please contact The Center for Education Planning and Development (cepd_edu@ml.soken.ac.jp).
